THE MURDERER SIGHTED.

George Van Horn supposed to be hiding in the Erie shaft.

It is thought among the miners of Jermyn and Mayfield that George Van Horn, the murderer who killed the Westcott, in Scranton, on the evening of August 28, is hiding in the old workings of the Erie shaft. This belief is not imaginary, for his hiding place has been discovered. The discovery was made by Michael Ruddy, an employe. It is not certain that Van Horn occupied it, but that is the general belief. While Mr. Ruddy was wandering about in an unused portion of the mine he heard a noise as if some one was trying to escape detection. He went to see some one who had been stealing the miner's oil or dinner pails. He followed the sound, and was at last rewarded by seeing a pair of legs as they were drawn through the roof and up on the surface.

Mr. Ruddy told his experience to Michael Barbour in this city, who is mine foreman. Mr. Barbour made a thorough search, and discovered a bed and bedding. The remains of food, an oil stove and cooking utensils were also found, and copies filed of the Scranton and Carbondale papers, showing that he desired to keep posted with public affairs.

Van Horn had friends in Mayfield and Jermyn who would be desirous to help him in hiding himself, helps to confirm this belief. A strict watch is being kept so that the fugitive will be captured if he shows himself again.

A SERIOUS MISHAP.

Railroad Travel Delayed by a Horse on Thursday.

Thursday afternoon a horse strayed from the West Side and in attempting to cross the little bridge leading from the gravity track fell between the ties. City Assessor James Pidgeon saw the accident and noticed that the passenger train that leaves here at 5 o'clock was approaching, signalled to the engineer and the train was stopped.

It took about half an hour to release the horse and all this time the passenger train was obliged to wait. It was fortunate that the accident did not occur at night, because a train might have been wrecked.
